How it Works – CGS partner procures and manages the supply and delivery of energy (natural gas and electricity). They transfer the energy to the local utility. The utility takes it the final stretch, through their distribution system, to the company facility. Our ability to help companies depends on a lot of factors. The best place to start in determining the options is a copy of a recent gas/electricity invoice.

Benefits – Some of the benefits of can be; reduced energy rates, price spike avoidance, budget stability, predictable cash flow, custom energy strategies and long term energy planning. Benefits will vary depending on the customers' energy strategy. However, all customers will have a single point of contact, who has access to expertise in all open energy markets across the country. Our partner will work with the customer to establish an energy strategy that is in line with the company's goals and objectives.

Ease of Transition – Every utility has their own rules, so the transition process will vary. Our partner understands these utility rules and timelines and will work with the utility to provide the best available transition date for the customer. They will coordinate and manage the contracts and necessary forms, making the transition as effortless for the new customer as possible.

*Opportunities will vary based on the state and utility regulations, as well as the utility rate class and the amount of energy consumed. All companies should be analyzed at the facility level.
